Secretary of State Kevin Shelley Issues Statement Regarding Today's Judicial Decision

SAN FRANCISCO --- Secretary of State Kevin Shelley issued today the following remarks on the ACLU lawsuit:

"The court has ruled in this difficult case and we will continue our preparations for the October 7th election," said Secretary of State Kevin Shelley.

"I am not a fan of punch cards, and I agree that they present a unique set of problems. I am acting to mitigate those problems as much as possible.

"I am committed to doing everything I can to assist all of California's diverse communities to get the information they need to cast their ballots carefully and deliberately.

"We are on target to modernize our voting systems by next March, and in the meantime we are actively working to anticipate and prevent as many potential problems as possible and to address others quickly and fairly when they come up," continued Shelley.

"Furthermore, I want to be sure that voters are fully aware of this special election. To that end, my office has initiated a voter outreach and education program."

The education effort includes the following:

- Visits by state election specialists to each punch card county to assist in educating voters, processing ballots, and avoiding Election Day problems. Punch cards will be used by Los Angeles, Mendocino, Sacramento, San Diego, Santa Clara, and Solano counties.
- Easy to follow step-by-step instructions on how to use the voting system in each county posted on the secretary of state's web site, www.ss.ca.gov. On the home page, click the button that reads Statewide Special Election, then click on Questions and Answers, and then select "How do I use the voting system in my county?"
- Coordination with county officials to ensure that sample ballots sent to voters in punch card counties emphasize instructions to vote for only one candidate and to thoroughly punch the pre-scored card.

- Coordination with county official to ensure adequate voter instruction on the use of new voting systems.
- Consultation and cooperation with thousands of community based organizations on voter outreach aimed at helping new voters to register and explaining the use of county voting systems.
- Preparation of multi-lingual materials to reach California's diverse communities.
- Public service announcements to run in all counties in the weeks leading up to the election.
- Editorials in local newspapers explaining the use of punch card voting and other voting systems.
- Election specialists dispatched statewide to assist county officials.
- Increased staff at the secretary of state's election hotline (1-800-345-VOTE and 1-800-232-VOTA) to address voter concerns in the days leading up to the election.
- Assistance to counties in recruiting and training poll workers.

In addition, Shelley said he would continue to work with legislative leaders to reimburse counties for the increased cost of the special election.

"Voter outreach is critical to making the October 7 election go as smoothly as possible," Shelley said. "I want each voter to know how to use the ballot system in their county so that every vote will count."

Shelley is the author of Proposition 41, approved by voters in March 2002, which authorized the sale of $200 million in bonds to pay for voting system improvements.
